Grahame Hall	S_01	S_01_01			01. Tourist Accommodation Definition	Interpretation	Support	Submitter supports the proposal to change from the definition of Tourist Accommodation to Visitor Accommodation.	No specific relief sought
Ngāti Pikiao Environmental Society	S_10	S_10_01			01. Tourist Accommodation Definition	Interpretation	Amend or support in part	The Society supports alignment with National Planning Standards where clarity is improved. However, the proposed replacement of "Tourist Accommodation" with "Visitor Accommodation" must ensure: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Emergency housing cannot be characterised as visitor accommodation. • Long-term occupation (28+ days) is clearly excluded. • Boarding houses are treated as residential activities. Rotorua's recent experience demonstrates definitional ambiguity can materially undermine community wellbeing.	The submitter requests that council includes clarification in regards excluding occupation exceeding 28 consecutive days and confirming emergency/transitional housing are residential activities.
Mikhail Nicolaas Steens	S_11	S_11_01			01. Tourist Accommodation Definition	Interpretation	Amend or support in part	The submitter supports the general intent of Plan Change 10 However, they oppose any aspect of Plan Change 10 that would, in effect, tighten or make more restrictive the rule pathway for small-scale, owner-occupied short-stay accommodation within an otherwise normal dwelling in RESZ1 (for example, a downstairs area used for Airbnb), whether by definitional change, terminology updates, or reclassification into an activity status that requires discretionary consent. The submitter is concerned that the proposed approach may create uncertainty and/or unintentionally capture ordinary homeowner arrangements within a discretionary consenting pathway intended for larger-scale visitor accommodation operations. This would impose unnecessary compliance costs and uncertainty on homeowners for low-impact activity, when effects can be appropriately managed through clear permitted thresholds and standards. The submitter seeks amendments to ensure Plan Change 10 provides certainty and proportionality by clearly distinguishing commercial-scale visitor accommodation from small-scale owner-occupied short-stay accommodation that remains ancillary to residential use, and by ensuring the District Plan does not unintentionally require resource consent for the latter where effects are minor and manageable.	Clarify and confirm that small-scale, owner-occupied short-stay accommodation within a dwelling (including use of part of a dwelling such as a downstairs area for Airbnb-style stays) is treated as ancillary to residential use and is not unintentionally captured by a discretionary activity category for "visitor accommodation", provided it meets clear standards/thresholds. Ensure the definitions and activity rules for Visitor Accommodation, Holiday Rental Accommodation, and Bed and Breakfast are clear, internally consistent, and outcome-certain, including clear guidance on how common homeowner arrangements are classified. If Council considers consent control is necessary for some short-stay accommodation, introduce clear, proportionate thresholds (e.g., scale of operation, number of guest rooms/guests, whether the owner resides on site, frequency/turnover) so that only higher-impact operations trigger a discretionary consenting pathway, and low-impact homeowner activity is not unnecessarily consented.
Hao Boutique Hotel Group	S_11	S_11_01	F_25	F_25_01	01. Tourist Accommodation Definition	Interpretation	Support in part	The submitter supports this submission point that sought to ensure the activities of Visitor Accommodation, Holiday Rental Accommodation, and Bed and Breakfast are clearly distinguished, with definitions and activity rules that are consistent, and outcome-certain, with appropriate guidance for interpretation/application.	The submitter requests that any further distinctions and clarifications are followed through and they are involved in any further amendments.
Stratum Consultants Ltd	S_12	S_12_01			01. Te Tūāpāpā Kura Kainga Ministry of Housing and Urban Development	S_12	S_12_01	F_28	F_28_01	01. Tourist Accommodation Definition	Interpretation	Oppose	The submitter supports the intent of Plan Change 10 to improve clarity and align definitions with the National Planning Standards but opposes aspects of the proposed changes due to their unintended impacts on emergency and supported housing. The submitter states that replacing "Tourist Accommodation" with "Visitor Accommodation" effectively reclassifies motels and boarding houses used for emergency housing as residential activities, leading to more restrictive consenting pathways without evidence of increased environmental effects. The submitter considers the approach creates an unjustified imbalance that favours visitor accommodation while constraining emergency and supported housing, potentially undermining the Government's ability to respond quickly to acute housing needs and conflicting with national direction on housing supply and access.	Consider other options such as performance standards.

Te Tūāpāpa Kura Kainga Ministry of Housing and Urban Development	S_23	S_23_04	F_28	F_28_02	01. Tourist Accommodation Definition	Interpretation	Oppose in part/amend	The submitter is concerned that replacing “Tourist Accommodation” with “Visitor Accommodation” effectively reclassifies motels and boarding houses used for emergency housing as residential activities. This shift is then used to justify more restrictive activity statuses—such as discretionary or non-complying—under residential rules, without evidence that emergency or supported housing generates greater environmental effects than other accommodation types. The submission notes that the Section 32 Report acknowledges the subjective judgement required when applying the visitor accommodation definition, yet the proposed provisions increase regulatory complexity, consenting triggers, and the likelihood of public notification. Based on recent experience in Rotorua, the submitter states that this approach leads to regulatory delay, uncertainty, and reduced responsiveness to urgent housing need. Overall, HUD considers PC10 creates an imbalance by enabling and clarifying visitor accommodation while exposing emergency and supported housing to higher regulatory thresholds without locality-specific justification. This risks constraining the Government’s ability to deliver timely housing support to vulnerable households and is inconsistent with national direction to enable housing supply and access.	The submitter considers that alternative mechanisms, such as performance standards, should be explored instead.
Hao Boutique Hotel Group	S_23	S_23_04	F_25	F_25_03	01. Tourist Accommodation Definition	Interpretation	Support in part	The submitter supports the submission point to update the new Visitor Accommodation definition as proposed.	The submitters request that further clarity is added to the new definition in relation to ‘ancillary activities’.
Hao Boutique Hotel Group	S_25	S_25_01			01. Tourist Accommodation Definition	Interpretation	Amend or support in part	Hao Boutique Hotel Group (HBHG) support the intent of the change to the new Visitor Accommodation definition. They note that it will provide greater clarity by removing ambiguous terms to recognise visitor accommodation as being distinct from boarding houses and private hotels. It will help re-focus Visitor Accommodation as being an activity that supports and strengthens Rotorua as a premier tourism destination by contributing to economic growth, cultural vibrancy, and visitor experience. However, the submitter considers that the new Visitor Accommodation definition should provide clarity as to what activities may constitute as ‘ancillary activities’ – like the wording of the current Tourist Accommodation definition. It is commonplace for visitor accommodation activities to include a range of ancillary activities that support and enhance the visitor experience. Therefore, greater certainty should be provided through the definition, that these activities would include, at least, for example, associated services or facilities such as visitor, service, conference, bar, restaurant, recreational activities and others of a similar nature. It is important that such a framework does not unduly restrict hotel expansion opportunities and associated tourism-supporting activities that contribute to the ongoing growth and vitality of Rotorua as a visitor destination.	Retain as proposed, but with amendment to the definition to include a range of example ancillary activities that are covered by the definition.
Te Tūāpāpa Kura Kainga Ministry of Housing and Urban Development	S_25	S_25_01	F_28	F_28_03	01. This reclassification is then used to justify more restrictive activity statuses under residential rules, including discretionary and non-complying pathways, without evidence that emergency or supported housing creates different or greater environmental effects than comparable accommodation activities. The submission notes that while the Section 32 Report acknowledges the need for subjective judgement in applying the visitor accommodation definition, PC10 increases regulatory triggers, consenting complexity, and the likelihood of public notification. Based on HUD’s experience in Rotorua, this heightened regulatory friction results in delay and uncertainty when responding to urgent housing need. HUD considers that PC10 creates an imbalance by enabling and clarifying visitor accommodation while exposing emergency and supported housing to higher regulatory thresholds without locality-specific evidence. Provision for Boarding Houses, Communal or Shared Housing and Other Forms of Residential Activities	RESZ-07, RESZ-O14, RESZ-O17	Oppose	The submitter opposes the proposed insertion of “public safety” into the relevant objectives and policies. The submitter notes that the term is ambiguous and lacks clear parameters for assessment within a resource management context. There is no reliable or objective mechanism to assess how future occupants of a property may behave, nor is it appropriate for land use planning provisions to attempt to regulate individual behaviour in this manner. Introducing such terminology risks subjective interpretation and inconsistent application, without delivering tangible planning outcomes. Provision for Boarding Houses, Communal or Shared Housing and Other Forms of Residential Activities	RESZ-07, RESZ-O14, RESZ-O17	Support	The submitter considers that introducing “public safety” shifts the focus of the District Plan away from effects-based resource management and into matters relating to the perceived characteristics or legal status of occupants. These are not matters that can be reliably assessed through land-use planning provisions and are more appropriately addressed through other regulatory and social service systems. The submitter is concerned that the inclusion of “public safety” in these objectives creates legal risk, including the risk that the provisions are ultra vires under the Resource Management Act. It also introduces a high degree of subjectivity and inconsistency into decision-making, as there is no clear or objective mechanism for assessing public safety outcomes through a resource consent process. Further, the submitter considers that these provisions raise human rights and discrimination concerns, particularly where housing activities may be treated differently based on who lives there, rather than how the activity functions or the environmental effects it generates. Provision for Boarding Houses, Communal or Shared Housing and Other Forms of Residential Activities	CCZ-17A	Oppose in part/amend	The submitter considers that Rule CCZ-17A, which captures “other residential activities not expressly stated”, lacks sufficient precision and creates significant uncertainty as to which activities require resource consent, and which effects are to be managed. The submitter is concerned that removing locational qualifiers, such as whether an activity is located on the ground floor, does not resolve the underlying issue that the rule is overly broad and may capture activities of a residential nature that do not give rise to adverse environmental effects. This approach increases regulatory discretion and the likelihood of public notification without demonstrating that such controls are necessary. The submitter considers that this provision is contrary to the stated objectives of PC10, as it reduces certainty, increases regulatory friction, and undermines the ability to deliver responsive housing solutions in the City Centre.

Public safety concerns relating to individuals subject to custodial or community-based orders are justice-system matters, not environmental effects and including them invites discriminatory decision-making based on who lives or may live in community housing rather than how the activity functions. Ara Poutama Aotearoa- Department of Corrections	S_24	S_24_12			02. Provision for Boarding Houses, Communal or Shared Housing and Other Forms of Residential Activities	CCZ-R38B	Oppose	Residential activities are permitted in the City Centre zones. Ara Poutama is concerned that the proposed inclusion of a generic category of “Other Residential Activities not expressly provided for” could result in residential activities that are not specifically captured by a Plan definition being classified as a Discretionary activity. That outcome would not support the increased supply of housing to meet the diverse needs of communities and a Discretionary activity status is not justified by reference to any environmental effects resulting from the Other Residential Activities.	1. Delete CCZ-R38B. 2. Alternatively, classify “Other Residential Activities not expressly provided for” as a permitted activity. 3. Any additional or alternative relief which addresses Ara Poutama’s concerns outlined in this submission.

Provision for Boarding Houses, Communal or Shared Housing and Other Forms of Residential Activities	CCZ-R38B	Support	The submitter supports this submission point for the same reasons applying to CCZ-R17A. HUD considers that CCZ-R38B introduces unnecessary regulatory discretion by capturing “other residential activities” without identifying specific environmental effects that require management. The submitter is concerned that this provision may inadvertently constrain residential and supported housing activities in the City Centre, increase consenting costs and delays, and expose such activities to public notification unrelated to land-use effects.	The submitter supports deletion of CCZ-R38B to improve certainty and maintain an enabling planning framework.

Waikite Valley Community Collective	S_21	S_21_01			03. Community Housing definition and provisions	Interpretation	Amend or support in part	The submitter supports the elaboration of the exclusions within the community housing definition. Their concern is specific to the rural zone; having multiple people intensively living on one site in a rural zone may have an adverse effect on those who rely on the rural zone for their livelihood. This is contrary to the amenity and rural characteristics of the zone. The submitter requests that there needs to be improved clarity regarding exclusions related to Provision for Boarding Houses and other forms of Communal or Shared Housing within rural zones.	They request the following specific changes: 1. Maintain the current maximum criteria of 8 people living in one residence, specific to the rural zone within community housing provisions. 2. The provision for community housing be a “prohibited activity” for over 8 people including staff, in the rural zone 3. Improved clarity regarding exclusions related to provision for boarding houses and other forms of communal or shared housing within the rural zone; adopting the same exclusions as community housing, as stated here “This definition excludes facilities where residents are subject to legal orders that restrict their freedom of movement, such as custodial care, home detention, or probation-related accommodation.
Hao Boutique Hotel Group	S_21	S_21_01	F_25	F_25_22	03. Community Housing definition and provisions	Interpretation	Support in part	The submitter supports the submission point with respect to their support of the exclusions within the community housing definition and their request that there needs to be improved clarity regarding exclusions for boarding houses and other forms of communal/shared housing within rural zones. They support their comments that having multiple people intensively living on one site in a rural zone may have an adverse effect on those who rely on the rural zone for their livelihood. The submitter notes that the Operative RURZ policy and rule framework already seeks to manage intensive activities of scale such as Community Housing exceeding 8 persons, by making such activities as non-complying activities. Such activities can have significant adverse effects on rural character and amenity, through reduced levels of open space, over intensification in housing development, increased traffic levels and artificial lighting. Such activities can also risk creating ‘out of zone’ development, and development that is unconnected with the rural economy.	A non-complying activity status should be retained as per the Operative plan. The submitter believes that a prohibited activity status does not follow an effects based approach and consider that a non-complying activity status still allows for the assessment of proposals on merit.

Community Housing definition and provisions	Interpretation	Oppose	Ara Poutama considers the exclusions in the community housing definition, and prohibited activity status for community housing in the rural zone: 1. Kāinga Ora – Homes and Communities	S_23	S_23_02			03. Community Housing definition and provisions	Interpretation	Oppose in part/amend	Planning definitions must remain effects-based rather than people-based. Therefore, Kāinga Ora oppose, in part, the new definition for Community Housing. Kāinga Ora opposes the proposed exclusions, as this distinction is not based on actual environmental effects. It is important to note that under the Resource Management Act (“RMA”), planning rules must relate to environmental effects, not the personal or legal status of occupants who may reside within community housing. Housing that accommodates people on home detention, probation, or other custodial orders do not inherently produce different environmental effects from other supported residential activities. The submitter notes that the proposal instead raises human rights concerns by creating a discriminatory planning distinction that targets individuals based on justice-system status rather than actual land-use outcomes. People subject to community-based sentences have the right to live in and be supported within the community, and planning definitions should remain effects-based rather than based on the legal status of a person.	Amend the definition of ‘community housing’ as follows: a single place of residence located on a site where specialised care or support is provided to meet the social or physical needs of residents. This definition excludes facilities where residents are subject to legal orders that restrict their freedom of movement, such as custodial care, home detention, or probation-related accommodation.
Te Tūāpāpa Kura Kainga Ministry of Housing and Urban Development	S_23	S_23_02	F_28	F_28_13	03. Community Housing definition and provisions	Interpretation	Support	The submitter supports this submission point opposing people-based exclusions within the definition of “community housing,” including exclusions based on legal or justice-system status. The submitter considers that planning definitions must remain effects-based and should not differentiate between housing activities based on the personal or legal circumstances of residents. Housing that accommodates people subject to community-based orders does not inherently generate different environmental effects from other forms of supported or community housing. The submitter is concerned that these exclusions introduce discriminatory planning distinctions that are not supported by the Resource Management Act and expose the District Plan to legal and human rights risk. HUD also notes the absence of locality-specific evidence demonstrating that supported or community housing generates adverse environmental effects that would justify more restrictive treatment. Further, the submitter considers that such provisions disproportionately affect vulnerable communities, including whānau Māori, and risk worsening housing insecurity by constraining the delivery of supported and community housing where it is most needed. HUD considers that the City Centre Zone is specifically intended to accommodate higher-intensity activities and residential uses, given its access to services, transport, and infrastructure. Community housing in this location is residential in nature and does not, by virtue of resident numbers alone, generate effects that are materially different from other residential, or accommodation activities anticipated within the zone. HUD notes that the Section 32 analysis does not demonstrate that community housing in the City Centre produces adverse effects that justify more restrictive regulation than other permitted or anticipated activities. HUD is concerned that imposing occupancy limits or heightened activity statuses increases consenting cost, delay, and uncertainty, which can inhibit the timely provision of supported housing without achieving improved environmental outcomes. Community Housing definition and provisions	RURZ-R17	Oppose	HBHG oppose their submission point of having a restricted discretionary activity status instead of discretionary for Community Housing in the RURZ as notified. We consider that it would be a confusing outcome to allow and prioritise such activities of scale as being more anticipated in the rural areas than Visitor/Tourist Accommodation activities which are provided for as a discretionary activity. The Operative RURZ policy framework recognises that the rural zones allow a broad range of activities to take place and specifically recognises that tourist attractions and tourist accommodation are provided for in that mix. Introducing lesser activity statuses for other activities like Community Housing, would create confusing expectations on the treatment of activities such as Visitor/Tourist Accommodation that will remain regulated and anticipated by the Operative RURZ framework. Te Tūāpāpa Kura Kainga Ministry of Housing and Urban Development	S_24	S_24_07	F_28	F_28_27	03. Community Housing definition and provisions	COMZ-R24(3B)	Support	HUD agrees that applying a Discretionary activity status to community housing accommodating more than eight people in the Commercial Zone is not supported by evidence of adverse environmental effects and imposes a disproportionate regulatory burden. HUD considers that commercial zones are generally well suited to accommodate higher-intensity residential and accommodation activities, given their access to services, transport, and infrastructure. An increase in the number of residents within community housing does not, of itself, justify full discretionary status in this zone, particularly where the Section 32 analysis does not demonstrate effects materially different from other permitted or anticipated activities. HUD is concerned that a Discretionary activity pathway increases consenting cost, delay, and the likelihood of public notification, which has been shown through recent Rotorua experience to create regulatory friction and opposition unrelated to land-use effects.	HUD supports a Restricted Discretionary activity status as a more proportionate and effects-based approach that enables relevant matters to be assessed without unnecessarily constraining the delivery of supported housing.

HUD agrees that applying a Discretionary activity status to community housing accommodating more than eight people in the City Centre Zone is not supported by evidence of adverse environmental effects and imposes a disproportionate regulatory burden. HUD considers that community housing is residential in nature and that an increase in the number of residents does not, of itself, justify full discretionary status in a zone that is specifically intended to accommodate a wide range of activities at higher intensity. HUD notes that the Section 32 analysis does not demonstrate that community housing at this scale results in effects materially different from other residential or accommodation activities permitted or anticipated within the City Centre. HUD is concerned that a Discretionary activity status significantly increases consenting cost, delay, and the likelihood of public notification, which has been shown through recent Rotorua experience to amplify opposition unrelated to land-use effects.	HUD supports a Restricted Discretionary activity status as a more proportionate, effects-based approach that enables relevant matters to be assessed without creating unnecessary regulatory friction or undermining the delivery of supported housing.

HBHG support the changes as notified for the reasons in Council's Section 32 Report. Additionally, whilst we acknowledge that the city centre is typically well suited to higher intensity activities, we note that Council have identified issues of concern with the effectiveness of the existing Community Housing provisions in being able to deal with the range of potential environmental, social and economic effects from such activities in the city centre. The effects, from such activities of unlimited scale, including their cumulative impacts, have the potential to detract from and work counter to the strong vibrancy and vitality outcomes sought for the CCZ by the Operative CCZ policy framework. HUD agrees that retaining a permitted activity standard for community housing accommodating up to eight people in the Rural Zone provides an appropriate, effects-based baseline and recognises community housing as residential in nature. HUD considers that community housing at this scale does not, of itself, give rise to adverse environmental effects that would justify a resource consent requirement. Retaining RURZ-R17(1) as notified provides clarity and certainty, avoids unnecessary regulatory barriers for smaller-scale supported housing, and remains consistent with the stated intent of Plan Change 10 to improve the usability of the District Plan. HUD notes the submitter's broader concerns regarding the proposed definition of "community housing" and addresses those matters separately. In relation to the permitted activity standard in RURZ-R17(1), HUD supports retaining the provision as notified.	Support the original submission point.

HUD agrees that classifying community housing accommodating more than eight people in the Rural Zone as a Discretionary activity imposes a disproportionate regulatory burden that is not justified by evidence of adverse environmental effects. HUD considers that community housing is residential in nature and that an exceedance of an occupancy threshold does not, of itself, result in effects that warrant full discretionary status. HUD is concerned that a Discretionary activity pathway increases consenting cost, delay, and the likelihood of public notification, which can materially constrain the timely provision of supported housing. HUD supports a Restricted Discretionary activity status as a more proportionate and effects-based approach, enabling consideration of relevant effects where scale increases, while avoiding unnecessary regulatory friction and uncertainty that is inconsistent with the stated intent of Plan Change 10 to improve clarity and usability of the District Plan.	Support the original submission point.
Hao Boutique Hotel Group	S_24	S_24_14	F_25	F_25_19	03. Community Housing definition and provisions	RURZ-R17(3)	Oppose	HBHG oppose their submission point of having a restricted discretionary activity status instead of discretionary for Community Housing in the RURZ as notified. We consider that it would be a confusing outcome to allow and prioritise such activities of scale as being more anticipated in the rural areas than Visitor/Tourist Accommodation activities which are provided for as a discretionary activity. The Operative RURZ policy framework recognises that the rural zones allow a broad range of activities to take place and specifically recognises that tourist attractions and tourist accommodation are provided for in that mix. Introducing lesser activity statuses for other activities like Community Housing, would create confusing expectations on the treatment of activities such as Visitor/Tourist Accommodation that will remain regulated and anticipated by the Operative RURZ framework. HBHG note that Community Housing exceeding 8 persons, is already a non-complying activity under the Operative RURZ framework. Such activities can have significant adverse effects on rural character and amenity, through reduced levels of open space, over intensification in housing development, increased traffic levels and artificial lighting.	A non-complying activity status be retained as per the Operative plan.

Te Tūāpāpa Kura Kainga Ministry of Housing and Urban Development	S_25	S_25_03	F_28	F_28_31	03. Community Housing definition and provisions	Interpretation	Oppose	HUD opposes this submission point. While the submitter expresses general support for the changes proposed through Plan Change 10, HUD does not support an unqualified endorsement of the plan change in its current form. HUD considers that Plan Change 10, as notified, has unintended consequences for the provision of community, supported, and emergency housing. In particular, HUD is concerned that the plan introduces higher regulatory thresholds, increased discretion, and greater uncertainty for supported housing activities, without demonstrating that these activities generate adverse environmental effects that justify such treatment. HUD's recent experience in Rotorua demonstrates that discretionary and non-complying activity pathways for emergency and supported housing result in significant regulatory friction, delay, cost, and public opposition unrelated to land-use effects. HUD is concerned that supporting Plan Change 10 without amendment would entrench these barriers and inhibit the Government's ability to respond effectively to housing need.	HUD supports amendments to Plan Change 10 to ensure the framework remains effects-based, proportionate, and consistent with national direction to enable housing supply and access.

Margaret Qu	S_26	S_26_01			03. Community Housing definition and provisions	Various	Amend or support in part	The submitter supports Plan Change 10's amendment to change the default activity status in the City Centre from Permitted to Discretionary (CCZ-R1), the inclusion of "public safety" in the Residential Objectives, and the clarification of definitions including Community Housing. These changes improve regulatory oversight and better recognise the importance of safety and cumulative effects. However, they oppose the absence of explicit spatial controls on emergency or welfare housing within the City Centre. Discretionary status alone may not adequately prevent clustering or cumulative impacts.	The submitter seeks amendments to the District Plan to introduce stronger spatial controls on emergency and welfare housing within the City Centre. Specifically, the submitter requests that emergency housing be classified as Non-Complying (or Prohibited) within a defined core commercial area, or be subject to explicit separation and concentration limits to prevent clustering. I also seek the inclusion of a clear objective or policy stating that the primary function of the City Centre is commercial, retail, tourism, and hospitality activity, and that land use decisions must protect and enhance this role.

Community Housing definition and provisions	Various	Oppose	HBHG oppose their submission point in support of the proposed change to discretionary activity default status in the CCZ. The reasons for this are as per our original submission. It appears this submitter may not be fully aware of the true impact that the blanket rule change will have on the range of unspecified activities in the CCZ. In summary, HBHG consider that the rule change will unduly restrict and create further uncertain consenting processes on the very activities that ought to be prioritised and enabled in the CCZ as per the Operative District Plan policy framework. Lauren James (late submission)	S_27	S_27_01			03. Community Housing definition and provisions	Various	Amend or support in part	The submitter raises concerns that Plan Change 10 to the Rotorua District Plan, while framed as a technical refinement promoting certainty and economic growth, will have unintended but foreseeable negative impacts on supported and community housing, particularly for Māori. The submitter notes that plan change prioritises visitor and tourist accommodation through permissive provisions, while failing to adequately protect or enable housing responses for people experiencing homelessness, housing insecurity, or complex needs in particular for Māori. The submitter argues that supported and community housing is essential social infrastructure, not a commercial or discretionary land use. Compared with the permissive approach taken toward visitor accommodation, supported and community housing faces higher regulatory barriers, increased consenting costs, and greater uncertainty. This imbalance risks prioritising visitor needs over resident wellbeing and economic growth over social protection. The submission also notes that Plan Change 10 is inconsistent with Te Tiriti o Waitangi obligations and equity responsibilities, particularly given Rotorua's origins as a township gifted by Ngāti Whakaue for the purpose of enabling communities to live and flourish. There is a clear tension between Council's stated leadership on homelessness and planning provisions that constrain the delivery of supported and community housing.	The submitter seeks the following relief: Explicitly recognise supported and community housing as essential social infrastructure across appropriate zones. Remove or reconsider rigid occupancy thresholds in favour of effects-based assessments. Provide more permissive activity status for supported and community housing than is currently proposed. Actively enable kaupapa Māori and whānau-based housing models. Undertake equity and Te Tiriti impact assessments focusing on Māori housing outcomes. Better balance economic development objectives with the protection and expansion of affordable, public, and supported housing. The submission concludes that Plan Change 10, if unamended, risks worsening homelessness and housing instability in Rotorua, particularly for Māori, and that economic growth should not come at the expense of whānau wellbeing and housing security.

Stratum Consultants Ltd	S_12	S_12_03			04. Default Activity Status in the City Centre 1 and 2 Zones	CCZ-R1	Oppose	The applicant opposes the proposal to make the default activity status within the City Centre Zone Discretionary rather than Permitted. The submitter notes that the City Centre should be an enabling environment that encourages investment, growth, and redevelopment. Introducing additional consenting requirements will increase costs, extend timeframes, and create further uncertainty for developers and landowners. Given the current economic climate and the presence of vacant commercial premises, additional regulatory barriers are counterproductive. In their view, the proposed change seeks to address a problem that has not been clearly demonstrated and risks undermining the vitality of the City Centre. The submitter requests that if Council have issues with activities being established in the city centre zones without the need of a resource consent, then deeper analysis should be undertaken to identify what these specific activities actually are. Once understood, these activities can then be listed as required resource consent with an appropriate activity status assigned to them, rather than taking a generic sledgehammer approach. Default Activity Status in the City Centre 1 and 2 Zones	CCZ-R1	Support	HUD supports this submission point opposing the use of a blanket discretionary default activity status in the City Centre as this approach is not supported by targeted, effects-based analysis. HUD considers the proposed changes are not supported by the s32 analysis and risk unintended consequences. HUD considers that broad discretionary mechanisms and catch-all rules, rather than clearly identifying and regulating specific activities of concern, creates unnecessary regulatory burden and uncertainty. This approach increases consenting costs and the likelihood of public notification without demonstrating that such outcomes are required to manage environmental effects. Drawing on HUD's experience with emergency housing resource consents in Rotorua, discretionary and non-complying pathways have resulted in significant regulatory friction, delay, and opposition unrelated to land-use effects. HUD is concerned that similar outcomes would arise under the proposed City Centre provisions, inhibiting the timely delivery of housing and other activities that support community wellbeing.	HUD therefore supports submission points seeking a more targeted and proportionate approach that retains an enabling planning framework while addressing demonstrated effects.

New Zealand Defence Force	S_19	S_19_01			04. Default Activity Status in the City Centre 1 and 2 Zones	CCZ-R1	Oppose	The submitter notes that the Section 32 Report states that the City Centre Zone requires “more targeted and deliberate management of activity types” to protect long-term quality, safety, and functionality. However, the proposed plan change does not follow through on this intention. Aside from a new “catch-all” rule (CCZ-R17A) and changes to the activity status of CCZ-R1, there is little targeted management of specific activity types. As a result, the broader implications of the “catch-all” approach are not assessed, including its effects on activities that do not generate the adverse outcomes the plan seeks to manage. One such activity is NZDF’s temporary military training activities (TMTA), which would be inappropriately captured by the new rule. NZDF conducts TMTA nationwide to fulfil its statutory purpose under section 5 of the Defence Act 1990, maintain operational capacity, and support community well-being and safety. Importantly, many NZDF training activities conducted “off base” are comparable to those undertaken by other public service agencies such as Police, Fire and Emergency New Zealand, or Land Search and Rescue. Training in off-base environments is essential to achieving realistic, context-appropriate skill development that cannot be fully replicated on-base. The proposed plan change fails to recognise these distinctions and applies an unduly broad restriction that could hinder NZDF’s ability to carry out necessary training activities.	Amend the plan change so that Rule CCZ-R1.1 remains a permitted activity and specific rules are introduced to address the issues that are of concern due to their adverse effects on the city centre. In the alternative, amend specific rules that may be inadvertently affected by this change including amendment of Rule TEMP-R2 to delete the exclusion of City Centre Zones so that temporary military training activities remain permitted in the City Centre 1 and 2 Zones. So that the changes directly relate to the outcomes sought, NZDF requests that the catch all Rule CCZ-R1.1 remain a permitted activity and specific rules are introduced to address those activities of concern as has been proposed through the introduction of Rules CCZ-R17A and CCZ-R17.3 relating to residential activities. This is vital to enable NZDF appropriate provision to undertake temporary military training activities (TMTA) which NZDF needs to be able to undertake to meet its statutory purposes and government expectations.

The submitter notes that the proposed change is viewed as inefficient, ineffective, and misaligned with the Operative Rotorua District Plan (ODP). Instead of targeting specific problematic activities in the city centre, it removes the broad permitted activity rule entirely—an approach that would unnecessarily restrict many positive, everyday commercial activities such as cinemas, entertainment venues, recreation facilities, galleries, markets, and similar uses that contribute to a vibrant city centre. The s32 evaluation has not adequately assessed the economic, social, or development impacts of such a shift, nor has it considered how this would undermine the ODP’s objectives, which explicitly promote a diverse, intensive mix of activities through an enabling regulatory environment. The proposal also fails to evaluate whether the remaining listed permitted activities would still support the diverse commercial mix the CCZ is intended to accommodate. Finally, the submitter notes that the change runs counter to emerging central government reforms aimed at creating a more enabling, growth-supportive planning system.	Delete the proposed change to Rule CCZ-R1. Luke Nelson	S_04	S_04_04			05. Boundary Adjustment Definition	SUB-S11(1)	Oppose	The submitter does not support the proposed amendments, noting that the intent of SUB-S11(1)(d) is to ensure no lifestyle-sized lots as a controlled activity however if that clause is not met it is not appropriate to require a lifestyle lot allocation under SUB-S6 or assessment against SUB-S10. If a lifestyle sized lot is created from an existing title on boundary adjustment it is a discretionary activity under SUB-R26(2) and usually the reason why such an activity is done is to allow the balance area to increase and be more suitable for farming while retaining minimum non-productive land around an existing title which often has a house. Existing titles already have rights to a house and a minor dwelling and the proposed change removes a pathway for aggregation of productive rural land into balance titles which is contrary to the intention for rural land!	Submitter notes that the creation of lifestyle lots is a completely unrelated activity compared to that of a boundary adjustment of existing lots and they request that the two activities remain separate. The submitter requests that the reference to "or relocation" should be removed from SUB-S11 as this is a hangover for the old "boundary relocation" rule.

McKenzie & Co Consultants Limited	S_10	S_10_05	F_22	F_22_03	05. Boundary Adjustment Definition	SUB-S11(1)	Oppose	MCCL oppose the submission point in support of the proposed changes to SUB-S11(1). We recognise that land fragmentation is an outcome of subdivision and has associated potential adverse effects in relation to such matters as lake quality, indigenous biodiversity, and rural production. However, for the reasons in our original submission, we consider that boundary adjustment subdivisions between adjoining titles, that may result in a lifestyle-sized lot, have less potential for the generation of significant adverse effects, given they move boundaries between existing developable sites. The Operative District Plan (ODP) recognises the distinction between these two different types of subdivision activities and deals with them through the assigned rules, activity statuses and sets of performance standards. The discretionary activity pathway of the ODP's subdivision provisions allows for all such associated effects of a boundary adjustment subdivision to be considered and assessed on merit. There are a range of assessment criteria and objectives and policies that already provide a clear framework for the assessment of such applications.	Oppose original submission.

Stratum Consultants Ltd	S_12	S_12_05			05. Boundary Adjustment Definition	SUB-S11(1); Interpretation	Amend or support in part	The applicant supports adopting the National Planning Standards definition of "Boundary Adjustment" to ensure consistency and alignment with national direction. Furthermore, the amendment to SUB-S11 is also supported where it clarifies which rule framework needs to be assessed when non-compliance with the boundary adjustment rule occurs. Previously, the use of this rule has been ambiguous. The submitter believes that this clarification needs to go further. For example, if a proposed boundary adjustment is not able to meet clauses SUB-S11(1)(b) or (c), the proposal shall be assessed as a Discretionary Activity pursuant to Rules SUB-R2(2), SUB-R7(2), SUB-R12(2), SUB-R16(2), SUB-R22(2) or SUB-R26(2) (zone dependent). However, if a proposed boundary adjustment is not able to meet clauses SUB-S11(1)(d) in the rural zones, does this now mean that it shall be assessed as a SUB-R29(2)? We believe, the application of this rule still remains ambiguous where non-compliances occur. Clarity needs to be provided about what rule an application shall be assessed against should one of the clauses in SUB-S11 are not able to be complied with.	Support the changes made to boundary adjustments, but with further clarity required.

Their submission seeks further amendments for clarification purposes, regarding which rule framework would apply, and to improve clarity regarding the treatment of non-compliances. MCCL agree in principle, that the current amendments to SUB-S11(1) as notified, are not fit for purpose. They consider that they are not clear enough for Plan users to readily understand with confidence. However, MCCL consider the amendments proposed as part of our original submission (or similar) will help provide the required clarity and ensure the two rule frameworks (for boundary adjustment vs standard subdivision) are kept separate and not muddled together. The reasons for this are as per our original submission.	Refer to changes sought in original submission.

McKenzie & Co Consultants Limited	S_22	S_22_01			05. Boundary Adjustment Definition	SUB-S11(1)	Amend or support in part	McKenzie & Co Consultants Limited (MCCL) supports the intent of the proposed change, for the purpose of introducing a definition for boundary adjustment subdivision. They state that this will assist with removing any existing ambiguity caused by the lack of a definition. Having a definition is critical to facilitating consistent interpretation of such an activity by the community, Council and all plan users. However, MCCL seek amendment of the new NPS-derived definition to ensure its application is suited to and consistent with the existing regulatory framework and definitions of the ODP, by reframing around "sites" rather than "allotments". MCCL explains that ODP subdivision and land use controls are framed around Sites, which are defined by records of title, rather than individual lots or parcels shown on survey plans. Using "allotments" risks confusion and unintended consequences, particularly where multiple lots are held under a single title. Amending the definition to focus on Sites would better align with existing ODP definitions, rules, and performance standards, and ensure the definition functions consistently within the current regulatory framework. MCCL also seek that SUB-S11 is updated, based on adopting the new definition for boundary adjustment. They seek changes that would remove duplication in wording and separate the performance elements of SUB-S11 from the 'definition' elements (now taken care of with the new definition).	Retain new boundary adjustment definition as proposed, but with amendment to include reference to 'Sites' in place of 'allotments'. Amend SUB-S11 based on adopting a new definition for boundary adjustment: SUB-S11 1. The subdivision standards for the zone shall not apply to boundary adjustment subdivision s. undertaken for the adjustment of boundaries between adjoining lots. Subdivision undertaken for the purposes of a b B boundary adjustment subdivisions shall comply with the following: a. No additional lots or lease areas for which a Computer Register (Certificate of Title) can be issued shall be created; and b. a. The adjustment or relocation of boundaries shall leave the resulting Computer Register (Certificate of Title) with similar areas to that existing prior to subdivision; and c. d. The adjustment or relocation of boundaries shall not increase the degree of non-compliance of any existing Computer Register (Certificate of Title) or lease area, with the site design performance standards contained in this part of the zone. d. c. In rural zones, the adjustment or relocation of boundaries shall not result in lifestyle-sized lots (less than 4 hectares) for which there was not an allocation
McKenzie & Co Consultants Limited	S_22	S_22_02			05. Boundary Adjustment Definition	SUB-S11(1)	Oppose	MCCL oppose the proposed amendment to SUB-S11(1) relating to boundary adjustment subdivisions that create lifestyle-sized lots and seek deletion of the added wording. MCCL consider there is no planning basis for singling out non-compliance with SUB-S11(1)(d), as all SUB-S11(1) performance standards carry equal status and consequences. The Operative District Plan clearly establishes boundary adjustment subdivisions as a distinct subdivision pathway. Those meeting all standards are Controlled Activities, while those that do not are Discretionary Activities, with zone subdivision standards expressly excluded. Introducing additional assessment for boundary adjustments that result in lifestyle-sized lots would undermine this clear framework and improperly conflate boundary adjustment rules with other subdivision regimes. The submitter notes that boundary adjustment subdivisions are inherently different from other rural subdivisions, as they involve reciprocal exchanges of land between existing titles and do not create new development opportunities. Whether or not a lifestyle-sized lot results, such subdivisions remain boundary adjustments and should continue to be assessed under the same limited performance standards and discretionary framework already provided for in the ODP.	The submitter requests deletion of the added text to SUB-S11(1).

Adequate provision shall be made for the supply and installation of electricity, telecommunication (including broadband capability open access fibre where reasonably practicable) and gas services (where available within 100m of the subdivision) for every site and building within the subdivision up to the frontage of the site, or lease area; ii. McKenzie & Co Consultants Limited	S_22	S_22_06			10. Wireless Telecommunications Rule	SUB-S9(3)(c)	Amend or support in part	The submitter supports the intent of the proposed change, to allow for other wireless technologies to be provided, as per the discussion in the s32 Report. However MCCL consider that the change should make more explicit reference to clarify that wireless technology is an acceptable form of service for subdivisions in rural zones, regardless of whether there are underground services available or nearby. Otherwise, the use of the term 'not practicable' brings in a parameter that is not readily measurable to determine compliance. The submitter notes that it is commonplace that most rural sites do not have underground telecommunications services at their boundaries. Wireless has been an accepted servicing solution by RLC consenting officers and engineers for some time. Whether or not there has been underground telecommunications services available to a rural site, is typically of no consequence, as wireless remains a higher level of service, regardless.	Retain change to SUB-S9(3)(C)(ii) as proposed, but with amendment to add note to clarify that wireless is an acceptable form of telecommunications service: Electricity, telecommunication, and services- gas shall be installed underground unless that is demonstrated to be impractical, or telecommunication is to be provided by wireless technology where underground services is not practicable ; Note for subdivisions in rural zones – wireless technology is an acceptable form of service regardless of proximity of any underground services.
McKenzie & Co Consultants Limited	S_22	S_22_07			10. Wireless Telecommunications Rule	SUB-S9(3)(c)	Amend or support in part	For similar reasons to the need to adapt the ODP servicing performance standards for telecommunications, there are now a greater range of power servicing options for subdivisions, that did not exist at the time the ODP was prepared. There are growing needs in the local rural community and across NZ, for the ability to provide more affordable power solutions for people to live on the land in rural areas. MCCL seeks that the Rotorua Operative District Plan's power serviceability requirements in SUB-S9(3)(C) are reviewed through PC 10, as they no longer reflect modern power technologies or current rural living needs. Advances in off-grid power systems now provide reliable and affordable alternatives to reticulated networks, particularly where distance and cost make traditional connections impractical in rural areas. MCCL also requests that the requirement for gas reticulation be evaluated, noting it is not generally an essential subdivision service and warrants reconsideration.	Re-evaluation of the suitability of the power servicing requirements under SUB-S9(3)(C) and inclusion of off grid solar systems as being an acceptable power service solution for subdivisions in rural zones (in certain instances).
